New Internet Venture Redefines Dining -- First to Introduce Yield Management and Frequent Dining Loyalty Programs for Restaurants
Chicago Firms Lead Investment

(CHICAGO, May 2, 2000) – iDine.com announced today that it is establishing a new internet dining venture that will redefine the way restaurants attract customers and the way consumers choose restaurants. Chicago-based Minotaur Partners is the lead investor in the new entity.

“Applying the same fundamental principles that changed the airline industry, iDine.com intends to transform the restaurant industry by offering dynamic promotions, yield management and loyalty tools to drive incremental business,” says Greg Robitaille, president and chief executive officer for iDine.com. “Similarly, it will become to diners what frequent flyer programs have become to air travelers,” he adds.

iDine.com is designed to enable restaurant operators to fill empty tables by delivering restaurant-controlled promotions and incentives to consumers. The unique service will also enable each restaurant to leverage its existing credit card processing system, track dining activity, and seamlessly deliver rewards to consumers. Unlike other online dining tools, iDine.com’s compensation will be performance-based; restaurateurs will pay only when consumers dine in their restaurants. iDine.com’s comprehensive website will let consumers browse restaurant listings based on varying criteria, make online reservations, and earn never-before-offered rewards from dining at participating restaurants.

RESTAURANTS SET REWARDS TO FILL EMPTY TABLES, MARKET TO CONSUMERS

The iDine.com concept is to increase restaurant revenues by providing variable pricing, yield management and customer relationship management (CRM) tools and solutions. In doing so, the company will:

- let restaurants continuously adjust rewards based on demand conditions, and place control of the consumer offering directly into the hands of the restaurateur;
- offer restaurants the ability to fill empty seats during typically under-performing day parts; and
- allow restaurants to target-promote to selected customer segments and engage in one-to-one marketing.

Each restaurateur will set the parameters for the variable incentives offered through iDine.com and simply “post” the desired level of incentives using phone, fax, email or through iDine.com’s secure web site.

COMPREHENSIVE REWARDS-BASED DINING SITE FOR FREQUENT DINERS

As the most extensive internet resource for up-to-date dining information, iDine.com intends to be a trusted advisor to frequent diners by providing fine and casual dining restaurant listings; the ability to search based on varying criteria (i.e., cuisine, location, price); restaurant profiles (menus, photos, average cost); ratings and reviews; directions and mapping assistance; online reservation capabilities; and dynamic promotions and special offers. Consumers will choose from a variety of reward types including iDine.com-branded loyalty program “points,” frequent flyer miles, restaurant gift certificates, and cash-off dining. The website will empower frequent diners by offering a mechanism to provide feedback to restaurants based on their dining experiences.

IDINE.COM CORPORATE STRUCTURE, SPONSORSHIP AND MANAGEMENT

iDine.com is a wholly owned subsidiary of Transmedia Network, Inc., a leader in dining savings programs. iDine.com will operate independently but will have access to Transmedia’s offline assets and capabilities – its merchant base of more than 10,000 restaurants, its more than 2.5 million card members, and its proprietary credit card transaction processing platform – providing an established initial audience base and enabling it to deliver restaurant-controlled incentives to consumers seamlessly.

Chicago-based investor Minotaur Partners will fund iDine.com initially. “The Transmedia/iDine.com opportunity seemed to us to be a highly logical ‘clicks and mortar’ business strategy that we think is very significant,” said Bill Lederer, chairman and chief executive officer of Minotaur Partners. iDine.com will receive additional financing from Merchant Partners and Sam Zell’s Equity Group Investments.

The sale of shares and warrants will be consummated in two steps of $4 million initially and $6 million subject to near-term shareholder approval.

Robitaille, who previously served as managing director for Equity Group Investments, and worked closely with Transmedia management during the past two years, will lead iDine.com’s dedicated management team. Most recently, he managed the successful integration of the Dining à la Card operation into Transmedia.

ROLLOUT UNDERWAY; 3Q SITE LAUNCH PLANNED

iDine.com plans aggressive sales and marketing efforts aimed at both restaurants and consumers, to include trade and consumer online and offline initiatives, direct sales and marketing campaigns aimed at Transmedia members and merchants, affiliate programs with online portals and rewards partners, and national sales consultants in top markets. The company expects to launch its new website in the early third quarter.
